

「 Unicorns in reality 」

In the real world, the narwhal may be the prototype of this mythical animal, but the narwhal lives in the deep ocean of the remote Arctic Ocean instead of the mountains and grasslands.

「 unicorn 」

In 398 BC, the ancient Greek historian Kotsias wrote in his book "The unicorn lives in India and the South Asian subcontinent. It is a wild donkey, about the size of a horse, or even larger. Their bodies are snow-white, their heads are dark red, they have dark blue eyes, and a horn grows from the center of their foreheads, about half a meter long."

「 legend 」

The origin of the unicorn legend may be traced back to the civilization of the Indus Valley.

「 legend 」

The bottom is snowy white, the middle is black, and the top is bright red. The sharp horns of the unicorn have strange magic.
